FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Agriculture students benefit from the new Brownfield Ag News scholarship and internship section

Jefferson City, Mo (November 15, 2012) – Future agriculture leaders can easily access timely scholarship and internship information at the Brownfield Ag News website.

The new blog-style format of our Scholarship & Internship section makes it easy for high school, college and graduate students to find updated news and information about grants, internships and more. We actively share the information on Facebook and Twitter – and, in turn, our readers share it with others via social media.

Scholarship and internship announcements can be found under the Ag Youth section of BrownfieldAgNews.com. Posts include scholarship and internship descriptions, application due dates and eligibility requirements. When available, links to applications are also posted.

Brownfield, founded in 1972, includes Brownfield Ag News radio network Brownfieldagnews.com, and Brownfield Mobile. Brownfield provides news, markets, weather, event coverage and feature and commentary programming relevant to those who live and work on farms and in rural communities in the United States, and to those with an interest in U.S. food and fiber production.

Brownfield currently has contractual partnerships with more than 340 affiliate radio stations. These stations air programming created by Brownfield's team of ten award-winning agricultural journalists, all Broadcast Council members of the National Association of Farm Broadcasting, along with an ag meteorologist, Washington D.C. policy analyst and two market analysts.
